Excerpt: . . . while doing this, Hector and Thyra made a charming picture. He was in his finest Highland costume; and Thyra in a white gown, brightened with beautiful coral ornaments her father had brought her from the Mediterranean. Then Paul said: Robert Thorson, it were ill indeed, to have a friendly meeting, and not have a few verses from The Lily. And the Dominie added: That is well said. It is the best of hymns. There are a hundred verses in it, Dominie. It is longer than a sermon, thou knows. But say for us only those few verses thou spoke on Petersons boat. Thou must remember; we were waiting for the nets to fill. Then Thyra who was sitting at Roberts right hand leaned toward him and said in a whisper: Speak to us, Robert; I would like it. And blushing with the pleasure of her kind glance and voice, Robert rose. There was a few moments silence, full of a serious expectation, while Robert spoke to his soul and called it to reverent recital: Sweet Jesus, O my blessed light, Who dead men dost to life invite, Lift me from out the devils hold, Dear lx)rd, and keep me in thy fold. With folded hands, in loving way, Let all created beings say Upon their knees, in sweet accord, Their praise before Thy face, O Lord I All skill of words would be in vain, Though man endeavored to explain What joy to Adam...
